As I write this, NBC News anchor Brian Williams is beginning a six-month suspension from his job. This punishment is part of the consequence that Williams must face after it was reported that he fabricated an account of his helicopter having been hit by a rocket-propelled grenade while he was reporting in Iraq. Williams attempted to recover from the error by announcing that he had “misremembered” the incident.

The lines between journalistic truth and entertainment were arguably blurred long before comedian Stephen Colbert coined the term “truthiness” to describe an evidently diminished demand for veracity in reporting. One could argue, I suppose, that in some cases such distortions are “victimless;” they make for a more entertaining, sensational story, and so long as the essential facts are still in place, no one is really harmed by such creative license.

But more often than not, there is a danger to “misremembering.” We Jews, of course, have sworn a solemn vow predicated on the importance of memory. Having dedicated ourselves to the premise that “never again” will we allow the horrors of the Shoah to unfold for ourselves or for those of any race, nation, or creed, we must ensure that our memory of things past remains clear in our consciousness and the consciousness of others. We must ensure that all are educated in order that they may carry for this memory and not become complacent.

We have seen an increasing publicizing of anti-Semitic incidents in this country and abroad (whether this represents a decisive increase in the number of such incidents, or merely increased reporting of them, has been debated). Terrorist incidents in Paris and Copenhagen; defaced gravesites and Jewish businesses in France and Belgium; anti-Semitic graffiti in Madison, Wisconsin and at UC Davis all strike a nerve. And as we speak out regarding incidents that impact our fellow Jews, let us not turn a blind eye or deaf ear when other minorities are attacked or abused: when Sikh men are attacked because of their turbans; when Muslim students are murdered and their killings are dismissed as the result of a “parking dispute;” when people of color continue to face inequality; or when gay or transgendered individuals are subjected to discrimination, it is incumbent upon us to speak up. To cry “foul” at anti-Jewish sentiments and yet stand idly while our neighbors bleed is the cruelest form of “misremembering.”

I try to live my life optimistically. I try to hold out hope that through education and conversation, through dialogue that seeks to diminish our fear of the “other” and works to engender an understanding of our commonalities, we can build a sense of brotherhood and sisterhood that will help us to rise above those who would seek to hate (or worse, to destroy) us. Yes, I believe in being vigilant, but I, for one, think there is a distinction to be drawn between vigilance and fear. If we allow our detractors to frighten us from celebrating who we are openly and confidently, then we have permitted them to win without even putting up a fight.

I recently travelled with our Confirmation students to Chicago on our annual class trip. As part of our itinerary, we visited the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center in Skokie, an important educational resource that I believe is on par with Yad Vashem in Jerusalem, or the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. The Skokie museum concludes with a quote, attributed to an inmate at the Sachsenhausen concentration camp in Germany. He would greet new arrivals and inform them starkly of the fate that awaited them, concluding, “I have told you this story not to weaken you but to strengthen you. Now it is up to you.”

In a similar vein, the stories coming out of Europe, or Wisconsin, or UC Davis, or any other locale in which anti-Jewish sentiment may rear its ugly head should not be permitted to weaken us. Rather, we should use them to strengthen us in our resolve that we have a right to live and observe our Judaism freely, to remember our history and learn from it. Let us not “misremember.”

L'Shalom,

Rabbi Alan Cook

SAVE THE DATE!

“Sinai Temple’s Annual Yom HaShoah Commemoration”

(Holocaust Memorial Day)

Sunday evening, April 12

Please plan to join us for this service of reflection.

Purim is upon us. As you know, it commemorates the salvation of the Jewish people in ancient Persia from Haman's plot to kill the Jews. We celebrate the occasion in many ways: reading the Megillah, exchanging food and drink and joining together in a festive meal. One aspect of Purim that is sometimes forgotten is donating to charity for the poor. We read about the struggles of the poor around the world but sometimes forget that difficult times come to those in our midst. We at Sinai Temple are committed to helping those less fortunate. On a regular basis, our members sign up to pick up food from Atlanta Bread Company and deliver it to the TIMES Center. Rabbi Alan leads an interfaith group devoted to working together to help those in need. Our religious school even tries to instill these values in our youth by having our Hebrew High students working at the Eastern Illinois Food Bank and TIMES Center. If you are interested in helping out those in need, please contact Rabbi Alan, Rabbi Jody or others on the social action committee.

In order for Sinai Temple to continue doing its good work, we certainly need your time and energy. But we also need your financial commitment. As my time as president winds down, I promise this is the last time I make this pitch. First, if you have not already made your pledge to Sinai for 2014-2015, please do so ASAP. Pledges do not need to be fulfilled until the end of our fiscal year, June 30. Second, please consider donations to endowed or obligated funds. Contributions allow us to use the funds for specific purposes such as camp scholarships, kitchen equipment, sanctuary renovation and b'nai mitzvah tutoring. Third, you can contribute without even thinking about it by using your temple-issued Schnuck's card which gives us a percentage of the sale. You can also do this at Meijer's and some online retailers. Fourth, please consider Sinai Temple with "planned giving" by making Sinai Temple a beneficiary in a will, IRA or insurance policy. For all of these options, check out our website or contact the office.

At this time of year when we are thankful for the continued existence of the Jewish people, we must also do what we can to fulfill Sinai's mission: maintaining a diverse Jewish community with a variety of worship choices, providing outstanding learning opportunities, and offering warm fellowship.

KITCHEN FUND

When making a donation to Sinai, please consider contributing to this important fund.

This Sinai Temple owned obligated fund helps to defray the costs for one's, kitchen maintenance, supplies and equipment. This fund is used more often than most funds because we are routinely purchasing food, napkins, coffee and other items on a weekly basis.

SINAI TEMPLE BOARD MEETING

February 9, 2015

- ☆ The President has nominated Art Siegel to fill the board position vacated by Rae Spooner. The Motion to accept the nomination was made and seconded. All in favor. A Motion to approve the January 2015 minutes was made and seconded. All in favor.
- ☆ Although expenses have been appropriated, we need to build up the building fund. There was discussion about Midlands Bank in that they requested us to sign an investment policy different from our current one. Jennie France will contact Midlands with our concerns.
- ☆ Rabbi Jody indicated that the religious school applied for and received a grant through the Jewish Federation of North America for $3500, in partnership with the local Jewish Federation, to offer engaging programs for families with young children and to increase outreach efforts.
- ☆ When the policy concerning ads in the bulletin was passed, we agreed to review it after 6 months. There have been no negative comments about the ads and we have received income from some steady advertisers. The consensus was to continue with ads and talk to a few nearby businesses.

At the time I am writing this, I am celebrating my 6th month anniversary as Director of Education at Sinai Temple. I feel very honored to have been selected to lead this wonderful school and I am excited to continue my work with the students, teachers and parents. The Religious Education Committee, Sinai Temple staff, the Sinai Temple Board, teachers, students and families are ready for some changes—and I am ready to implement ideas that will help us achieve our goals. An important part of the process is giving parents, students and teachers an opportunity to express concerns and to identify areas of strength. Within the next several weeks, religious school families will be asked to complete an online survey. I have spent a good deal of time creating questions that allow me to gather information that will direct my attention to the areas of greatest concern. After the survey responses have been compiled, parents will be invited to a meeting where I will present some of the data and share my vision for the Sinai Temple Religious School. I ask that you please dedicate the time you feel you need to complete the survey and answer the questions in an honest way. While I certainly won't promise that every concern will be addressed immediately, I will use the information to develop our program to meet the mission of our school.

Please continue reading and take a moment to ponder the mission that guides our school. "The mission of Sinai Temple Religious School is to provide a positive, stimulating and creative learning environment that facilitates the development of active and enthusiastic Jewish youth. This is achieved through providing an excellent learning environment, materials, and faculty, as well as an atmosphere conducive to life-long Jewish learning. The goal is to foster a strong and positive Jewish identity and commitment to living a Jewish life. Our hope is that students develop a strong sense of what it means to be Jewish and to have a strong commitment to Judaism and Jewish life that carries through to adult life." I look forward to working together to make sure that we are achieving our mission and developing the next generation of strong, dedicated Jewish adults.

We teach our young people the importance of God and Torah. Students are instructed on and exposed to Jewish religious practice and prayers, Jewish holidays and customs, Jewish history and the Hebrew language. We aim to foster a commitment to Israel and social responsibility.

In general, I feel that our children are enthusiastic about being at Religious/Hebrew School (even if they say otherwise at home—I see a lot of smiles in class). I look forward to working with our families to ensure that Sinai Temple Religious School is meeting the goals that are articulated in our mission and that we continue to provide an incredible Jewish educational experience for the children in Champaign-Urbana.

Sinai Temple Religious School will host a summer day camp for children entering Kindergarten through 6th grade. Camp activities will include sports, water play, crafts, cooking and more. Jewish themes will be present but camp will not feel like our more formal Religious or Hebrew School. As you begin to plan your summer schedule, please keep Sinai Temple Summer Camp on your list of options. Dates will be finalized soon and we plan to offer camp early in June.

FYI

In Pirkei Avot 2:5, Hillel imparts the importance of community with his maxim "al tifrosh min hatzibur." The safety and well-being of every person in our community is of paramount importance, and the Sinai Temple Board as well as Religious Education Committee are currently monitoring the recent outbreak of measles. We are considering whether there is a need to create a vaccination policy, studying the Jewish response regarding immunizations and determining the possible impact that such a policy might have on our community. Our goal is to keep Sinai Temple a safe space for all members and guests. If you have concerns, please reach out to Rabbi Jody, Rabbi Alan or a member of the board.
