The blood drive at Sinai Temple on Aug 19th was a great success! We collected 33 units for the local blood supply. New this year was the double red machine. Thanks to Dov Cohen for being our first double red donation. This process allows for two units of packed red blood cells to be collected but the donor gets back their plasma so they are less dehydrated. Red cells are given mostly to newborn babies and cancer patients who cannot tolerate or do not need the volume of whole blood. The family that donates together award goes to Mike and Monique Tsipursky who were well supervised by their children during their donation time.

Thanks from the social action committee to everyone who donated and participated!
Rabbi Benay Lappe is a Conservative Rabbi, the founder and executive director of SVARA, a self-described “radical Yeshiva” based in Chicago. One of Rabbi Lappe’s most famous lessons, which has been widely shared on the internet, begins with a quote from Rabbi Lisa Edwards. It states, “If a donkey were to read the Torah, it would focus on all of the donkey stories.”

What Rabbi Edwards (and Rabbi Lappe) mean by this quote is that it is natural for a reader to identify with those individuals in a text with whom we can most easily find sympathy. Like seeks out like. So, a donkey would read the “donkey stories” and say, “Hey, that’s me! I can relate to that!” In a similar manner, those who have experienced, for instance, sibling rivalry might find that the Joseph narrative or the story of Cain and Abel particularly resonates with them. Those who see in themselves a rebellious streak might identify with Korach and his band.

We don’t always allow ourselves the opportunity to take a step back and think about what stories are most meaningful to us, which narratives bring meaning to our lives or heighten our sense of connection to God and to the world in which we live. Indeed, much of our liturgy is grounded in the language of plurality, taking worship as a shared experience. We don’t say, “Avi Malki” (my parent, my ruler), but rather “Avinu Malkeinu” (our parent, our ruler). In that subtle linguistic distinction, we link ourselves to the others in the congregation.

To a degree, I think that’s a good thing. We are taught “Al tifrosh min ha-tzibbur, do not separate yourself from the community,” and I think that shared prayers—both of atonement and of praise—can help to strengthen communal bonds. But it’s also important that we pause from time-to-time to delve into the personal rewards that we can derive from reading a traditional text or encountering a liturgical passage through the lens of our own self-interests. What are your “donkey stories?” What elements of our tradition inspire you, make you want to strive harder, give you hope for the future?

The story is told of a teacher who encountered one of his students a few days before the High Holidays. The student seemed eager to be on his way, while the teacher wished to chat. “What’s your rush?” the teacher asked. “I’m sorry, sir,” the student replied, “The holidays are nearly upon us and I must go home and review my machzor.” The teacher answered, “Ah. No need to worry. The machzor has not changed since last year. But you likely have. Instead of reviewing the machzor, you would do well to review yourself.”

Our machzor has not changed. Nor has our Torah or any of the other sacred texts of our tradition. But since we have each changed, it behooves us to review and think about where we will find meaning and purpose in the stories and writings of our people. As we approach these Yamim Nora’im, these Days of Awe, I encourage you to look for your “donkey stories” and see where you can find inspiration for the coming year.

Shanah Tovah U’M’tukah,
A Good and Sweet New Year From Our Family to Yours,
Rabbi Alan Cook

We’ve all returned from our travels of the summer, ready for a new year. I’d like to share an experience Diane and I had during our recent trip to the west. Part of our tour involved a visit to the Heritage Park in Calgary, Alberta. In a place where we did not expect to encounter many Jews, we discovered a little gem in the form of a small early 20th century synagogue, where a woman was demonstrating the art of challah braiding and a man was sharing a Czechoslovakian Torah that had been rescued from the Holocaust. It made us feel at home and remember how important our Temple—and our heritage—are to us. And now we’re excited to be back in C-U and ready to begin all the activity that September has to offer at Sinai Temple!

September is the month of the High Holidays this year, starting on September 1 with Selichot. Rosh Hashanah, Kol Nidre, Yom Kippur and the first part of Sukkot all come in September this year. The whole community convenes on Erev Rosh Hashanah to kick things off, before the Reform and Traditional congregations hold individual services for the remainder of the holidays. We thus celebrate our unity and diversity. Whichever group you worship with, Sinai Temple provides a space for your commemoration of these holiest days of our calendar.

The Board decided this year to waive all expenses for youth programming during our holiday services. There are several options for our younger congregants. Babysitting is available each day of the holiday services for the youngest children. In addition, Rabbi Jody will be leading Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur morning services for kids who wish to attend. There are also special family services in the afternoon on the first day of Rosh Hashanah and on the day of Yom Kippur. Everyone is invited to join us at Maynard Lake on the afternoon of the first day of Rosh Hashanah for a Tashlich ceremony in which we symbolically cast off our sins.

The High Holidays are a time of personal reflection and community involvement. We as Jews are encouraged to deepen our commitment to G-d and humanity, and this is the time of year when we all renew our commitment to the Temple, both in service and financial support.

On Monday, September 3, the Labor of Love is an opportunity for everyone to come to the Temple to help with some much-needed TLC to get our worship spaces and grounds ready for the holidays. Please plan to come and lend a hand between 9 am and noon.

We’ve all received our letters from the Temple office asking us to decide on our level of financial support for the coming year. As you consider your level of support, please bear in mind: many temples require their members and visitors to buy tickets for the High Holidays, often at great expense. We don’t do that at Sinai, because we rely on our members to recognize their own responsibility to support the Temple and its activities. When you are deciding on your voluntary contribution for the year, please take a moment to reflect on what a wonderful community you belong to and how much that community needs your help and support!

I’ll close with an update on our renovation project. The Board voted in August to work with Ratio Design of Champaign to complete our renovation. The entire Temple community will be called upon to get involved, both with respect to design ideas and financial backing for the project. With everyone’s help, we can make the redesign of our sacred and social spaces something we can all be proud of for many years to come.

See you in Temple!

SINAI TEMPLE AUGUST 2018 BOARD MEETING

- Sinai Temple will host and participate in the “Union of Reform Judaism Day of Learning” on October 28. This is an event held at various locations around the country led by facilitators from URJ that makes available knowledge about good governance practices for synagogues. We hope to welcome interested people from across Illinois and Missouri in addition to our own Temple members to participate in this forum. Participants pay a nominal fee, which covers all expenses for the event. Board members and other curious congregants are encouraged to attend. Let Rabbi Alan know if you are interested.

- The Board voted not to charge for any youth activities during the High Holidays this year, including babysitting.

- The Board voted overwhelmingly to hire Ratio Design of Champaign to do the renovation of our sacred and social spaces.

- Sinai Temple will be a sponsor of a block party at Hillel on August 30 to celebrate Rabbi Benjamin Frankel, former Sinai Rabbi and founder of the first Hillel in the United States. The City of Champaign voted to give the block of John Street in front of Hillel the designation “Honorary Rabbi Benjamin Frankel Way.”
From our Educator

Rabbi Jody Cook

During the course of my rabbinate, I have been asked so many times if I was prepared. When I officiated my first wedding, was I prepared? Was I prepared to provide counsel to an elderly widow when his wife of 57 years passed away? At my first pulpit, did I complete my sermons in time? Was I prepared mentally for the challenge of going from a brit milah to an unveiling to a wedding, all in the course of a day?

I am a planner. I research, practice, make lists and cross items off. I compare, consider pros and cons, organize and reorganize. And I learn, over and over, that no matter how much time and energy I spend preparing, I can’t anticipate how every detail will play out and therefore, I need to improvise.

Thirteen years ago, Rabbi Alan and I were preparing to welcome our first child, Gabe. We didn’t know that Gabe would be Gabriel, and not Gabriella, which seemed to be more stressful to family members who wanted to be in Denver with us for a brit milah than it was to us — the ones planning for a brit milah that might not happen. We, two pulpit rabbis, were planning for a baby who was expected to arrive on Yom Kippur. We had volunteer sermon readers in place, cue sheets were shared with alternates who could lead the congregations in prayer and sermons were written well in advance. And then Gabe waited until the middle of Sukkot to enter the world.

Thirteen years later, I am still working on finding the right balance, and this time of year is my biggest reminder that I can’t always prepare for everything! Each August, I need to finalize my hiring for the religious school, print registration forms and teacher handbooks. I have programming to plan, class lists to type, High Holy Day activities to develop. I have to get Gabe, Orli and Eden ready for another secular school year, check school supply lists and clothes, sign up for activities. And I face a personal challenge of finding time to prepare myself for Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. Finding time for introspection and reflection tends to be last on my list, even though it should be first. I can find time to bake honey cake and slice apples, but I don’t succeed at finding enough time to truly consider changes I would like to make in my life. Perhaps this year will be different, but if not, I know that self-reflection is at least on my list of things to do to prepare for the new year and one year, I will be able to cross it off!

HIGH HOLY DAYS FOR YOUTH

JEWnior Congregation and Babysitting will be offered again this year. Please sign up in advance. Information was included in the High Holy Day mailing. If you need a new copy of the form, please contact Rabbi Jody.

Babysitting will be offered during erev (evening) services. During daytime tefilot (prayer services) we will offer babysitting (through PreKindergarten) and JEWnior Congregation for kids in grade K-6. For the safety of your children and other worshippers, children will need to be signed in and out of the programming by a parent or other designated adult.

Gabe Cook Bar Mitzvah
Gabriel Benjamin Cook will be called to the Torah as a Bar Mitzvah on September 29, 2018, Shabbat Chol HaMoed Sukkot. Gabe has been practicing for this moment for many years and is excited to share his first public Torah reading with the CU Jewish community, family members and friends. Gabe is a 7th grade student at Franklin Steam Academy. He enjoys playing guitar, family vacations (especially to Disney), hanging out with his dog, Oogie, and spending time taking things apart and using parts to build new things. Gabe loves spending time at Sinai Temple and at OSRUI (overnight camp). It is possible that he spends more time at these two favorite places than at his own home. For his mitzvah project, Gabe decided to focus on food insecurities because it is a link between his Sukkot Torah portion and his passion to help other people. Gabe has been volunteering at Feeding Our Kids, a local organization that provides meals to school age children. Gabe, Orli , Eden, Rabbi Jody and Rabbi Alan can’t wait to share this simcha with our community - we hope that you will celebrate with Gabe and our family in September.

The purpose of Sinai Temple is to worship God in accordance with the Jewish faith; to cultivate a love and understanding of Jewish heritage through education; to stimulate fellowship in the Jewish community; to strengthen bonds of loyalty with Jewish people everywhere; and to bring nearer the Dominion of God on earth through an emphasis on righteousness (tzedakah), commandments (mitzvot), and goodwill (gemilut hasidim) to one another and to society at large.
