From Rabbi Alan Cook’s Desk

Recently, our Sunday morning Adult Education group had a session on Gematria. This is a system whereby Hebrew letters are substituted for numbers in an effort to find additional hidden meaning in a word. For instance, we associate the number 18 (and multiples thereof), with good luck and life. This is because, in gematria, חי, the Hebrew word for “life” is equivalent to 18 (the chet is 8 and the yod is 10).

There is a system of textual interpretation utilizing gematria that theorizes that secret meanings to words or phrases are hidden in their gematria values. A fine example of this is derived from the Passover Haggadah. Recall that the Haggadah speaks of four types of children: A wise child, a wicked child, a simple child, and one who does not know how to ask. In this series, the wise child is seen as possessing the sort of character toward which we should all aspire. This is a wholly righteous individual, also known as a tzaddik.

By contrast, a wicked child is seen as the embodiment of evil. Such a child is to be spurned and avoided. In fact, the Haggadah teaches that with such a child, we must “dull his teeth.”

But Rabbi Eliezer Rokeach (ca. 1665-1742) taught that the difference between a wise child and a wicked child is not as stark as one might think. He showed this through gematria. The numerical value of tzaddik is 90+4+10+100= 204. A wicked person, a rasha, has a gematria value of 200+300+70= 570.

But if we fulfill the command to “dull his teeth” (teeth in Hebrew are shinay, and we can “dull” them by removing them from the equation). Shinay in gematria is 300+50+10+6= 366. Taking a rasha (570), therefore, and dulling/removing his teeth—shinay (366), leaves us with a righteous person, tzaddik (204).

Rabbi Eliezer’s point is more than a mere gematria parlor trick. He is showing us that each of us has a choice in our character—at Passover time and throughout the year. We can reject the relevance of the exodus narrative in our lives, like the wicked child, showing ourselves unworthy of redemption. Or we can behave wisely and perform acts of righteousness, like the wise child. These qualities are not ingrained in our being as an accident of our birth; as humans endowed with free will, we have the opportunity to choose our behavior and thus mold our destiny.

There’s a reading in the Mishkan Tefillah prayerbook that invokes a metaphor: “…wherever we go, it is eternally Egypt.”

We always have the opportunity to seek freedom, to resist oppression, to prove ourselves worthy of God’s redemptive power. But, as Rabbi Eliezer has shown, the gulf is not so wide between those who act wisely and those who act wickedly. May we strive to be wise children, heeding the messages of Passover and sharing them with those who will follow us.

Wishing you a zissen Pesach, a sweet Passover,

L’Shalom,

Rabbi Alan Cook

Near the end of this month, we begin the celebration of Passover. In the Seder each year, we retell and relive the miracle of Exodus, the classic story of liberation and redemption that has inspired not only our own people but all people all over the world. Passover marks the beginning of our identity as Jews and is the source of our empathy and compassion for those in our world still enduring slavery and injustice. We are reminded many times in the Torah of our responsibility to welcome and care for the strangers among us, because we know better than anyone else what it is to be a stranger in a strange land. One of the most moving parts of the Seder our family celebrates is the dipping of karpas in salt water to remind us that, however much freedom we enjoy, there are millions in the world who are not free. Let us not turn a blind eye to their plight but rather work for a day when all people everywhere can be free. May our example inspire them to yearn to breathe free, so that peace can reign throughout the earth. Let us be defined, therefore, not as a people who have endured great suffering, but as a people whose capacity for compassion blazes brightly, illuminating the world. This is the true meaning of Passover.

As you know, Board members and officers have term limits in our Temple, so each year we convene a committee composed of members of the Board and members of the congregation to find individuals who are willing to take on these responsibilities for the coming year. This is a wonderful opportunity to serve the community and develop skills you may not be aware that you possess. You also get to meet and interact with some great people to have this leadership experience, and, at the same time, it creates a more diverse collection of ideas, attitudes, and approaches to add to the mosaic of Sinai Temple. We are truly a community that only gets stronger the more of ourselves we bring to it.

Finally, a word about Yesod Le’Atid, A Foundation for the Future. Having participated in the visit the weekend of March 1-3 by our architects, Michael Landau and Joshua Zinder, I am feeling very positive and energized about our upcoming renovation project. Various others are also sharing their impressions in this month’s bulletin, but I wanted to talk a little bit about what I learned. I attended several services and meetings, as a member of the congregation, as a member of the Board, and as a member of the Sinai Renovation Committee. Those of us who were present for the Saturday Evening Roll-Out got to meet the architects, learn a little about who they are and what they plan to do for us, and hear from our Development Committee about fundraising to date. I want to thank the Renovation and Development Committees for putting together this event and allowing us all to start getting excited about the possibilities for our renovation. If you missed that event, don’t worry: There will be other opportunities to interact with these committees and with the architects in coming months. We can all be very proud of the work our committees and Board have done to bring us where we are now, and, with the help of the entire community, we can look forward to a bright future for Sinai Temple.

See you in Temple!

From the Board

President Rob Ore

My own term as president is drawing to a close, and, as I look back over my tenure in that position, I feel so fortunate to have had this chance to learn, grow, and serve. The term of a president is so brief that, by the time you figure out how to do the job, it’s time to step aside and hand over the reins to your successor. But this is good for everybody. It allows more people to have this leadership experience, and, at the same time, it creates a more diverse collection of ideas, attitudes, and approaches to add to the mosaic of Sinai Temple. We are truly a community that only gets stronger the more of ourselves we bring to it.

SINAI TEMPLE MARCH 2019 BOARD MEETING

- The Board is delighted to welcome Amy Roady as a new Sinai Temple member. Please welcome her to our community!
- Rabbi Alan’s D’Var Torah: In the Sabbath before Purim, we need to remember threats, such as Haman was to the Jewish people, and be vigilant to these, while also continuing to live our lives in an open manner and spirit.
- The Sinai Renovation Committee provided an update on Temple renovations, with review of the firm Landau|Zinder’s recent visit to Temple Sinai on March 1-3. The architects observed and participated in many Temple activities, and they met with Congregation members and various committees. The Board voted to have Landau|Zinder create a master plan for the Temple renovation. This master plan will facilitate a holistic integration of the planned renovations with all Temple spaces and future needs.
- Wynne Korr highlighted the success to date in fundraising and financial pledges for the upcoming renovation, while also noting the need for additional work to reach the Temple’s fundraising goal.
- The Purim baskets fundraiser for the Religious School was a smashing success and exceeded the fundraising goal. Around 300 baskets were delivered during the Purim week. Likewise, Trivia Night on February 23 raised considerable money for the Temple and provided a night of fun trivia challenge to all.
For his Bar Mitzvah, Gabe received a beautiful haggadah. Recently, he started to look through it and asked if we could use it at our seder this year. I remembered a seder that I attended in Israel where each participant was asked to bring a haggadah. There were 75 people at this seder—it was an amazing evening, but what really made the meal and rituals engaging (and INCREDIBLY LONG) was that each person was asked to share a commentary from the different haggadot that he/she felt was interesting…for every step of the seder.

The seder is intended to be for all participants. There are themes of the seder that are relevant to people of all ages and abilities; journeys, questioning, freedom and food. The particular haggadah that we use at our table is merely a book that guides us through the order of the seder. Filled with insight and commentary and illustrations, the expansive collection of haggadot is worth exploring. Ultimately, it is the experience at the seder that engages and connects us to our ancestors. Our purpose is to retell the story so that each of us feels as if we were in Egypt at the time of the Exodus. For some of your guests, this might mean tasting bitter herbs and salty water. For others, it might mean physically carrying something that is heavy or being given a “Minute to Win it” challenge that requires careful thinking and concentration.

As you prepare for your seder this year, in addition to planning the meal and polishing the silver, think carefully about how your experience can teach those who will sit around your table. How will you give every member of your seder a way to connect to the story of our ancestors, which is also our story?

The purpose of Sinai Temple is to worship God in accordance with the Jewish faith; to cultivate a love and understanding of Jewish heritage through education; to stimulate fellowship in the Jewish community; to strengthen bonds of loyalty with Jewish people everywhere; and to bring nearer the Dominion of God on earth through an emphasis on righteousness (tzedakah), commandments (mitzvot), and goodwill (gemilut hasidim) to one another and to society at large.

GREEN TEAM

In April we observe not only Passover, but also the secular Earth Day and Arbor Day. We are reminded through both spiritual observance and environmental action that nature is powerful. Just as we recount the story of Exodus in every generation, we need to teach every generation to care for the earth through sustainable practices.

Thanks to everyone who got ready to celebrate “World Water Day” (March 22) at First Friday on March 1. Our efforts to cut waste with reusable dinnerware, and learn about water preservation helps Sinai Temple be a more sustainable congregation. Special thanks to Alice Berkson for the water-themed table décor, too!

Green Team Tip, submitted by Green Team “Coach” Cindy Shepherd, Faith in Place: Check out the youtube series “Global Weirding”. Short, simple explanations to help us talk about Climate Change in a compassionate, but scientific way! www.pbs.org/show/global-weirding/.

SIPUREI SIFRIYAH ( Tales from the Library)

THANK YOU to the following people who spent the morning of Sunday March 10th moving our entire collection! This allowed the lower level to be dried out thoroughly after water damage:

- Robbin Higgins (Library Committee member, who is also returning this week to help sort damaged books) and Neil Higgins, who both drove all the way from Bradley, IL;
- Linden Galloway (Library Committee member);
- Gary Bernstein;
- Jake, Malachai, and Zev Sosnoff;
- Carol Belber;
- Susan Schomer;
- Dan Kopolow;
- Jessica Kopolow and others (for supplying much-needed boxes and crates)

Sadly, we lost our adult biography section to water damage, but it could have been a lot worse. Stay tuned for more library updates. In the meantime, if you need a certain book, please email me at sinaitemplelibrary.com. I’ll try to find it for you in our state of controlled upheaval.

Katherine Coyle, Library Committee chair

Sinai’s architects arrived for the weekend of March 1–3, and had the opportunity to take in the breadth of our congregation. Starting with the First Friday service and dinner, continuing through Saturday’s ETM and kiddush, and with a tremendous event on Saturday night to celebrate the start of the project. Michael Landau and Joshua Zinder, the principals of Landau/Zinder spoke about synagogue design in general, and their approach. Surveys were collected from congregants who wanted to complete one. The survey is also available through the Sinai web site.

The evening also featured good news about the fundraising efforts so far—please see the Development Committee update for more. On Sunday, March 3, the architects had additional meetings with the Renovation Committee (SRC), Security Committee, and the Board of Trustees. More discussions and visits will follow.

Sanford Hess, Chair

As Sanford noted, our weekend with the architects was inspiring and a reminder of the challenges ahead as we seek to make our space match our vision of a welcoming, inclusive Jewish community. We are thankful to the early investors in building our foundation for the future, Yesod Le’Atid. We all need to think about how we can step up and support this initiative. You can find a pledge form conveniently enclosed in the bulletin or online at sinaitemplecu.org. Click on Yesod Le’Atid to find the form and more information on the renovation. Please email me at wynne.korr@gmail.com if you have any questions.
