From Rabbi Alan Cook's Desk

Elsewhere in this bulletin, you'll see a Mazal Tov to Tamarra and Andy Bernstein, at whose wedding I recently had the honor of officiating. Tamarra and Andy are relatively new members of our congregation, and it was a true pleasure to be part of their special day. But I want to tell you a bit (with their permission) about how the day unfolded.

The wedding was scheduled to take place in Streator, Illinois. If you don't know where that is (I didn't at first, either), it's about an hour northeast of Bloomington, in LaSalle County. The night before the wedding, as I was preparing my remarks, I had a minor question and realized that I didn't have Tamarra and Andy's cell phone numbers with me, and I wasn't sure that they had mine. I brushed it off because I planned to arrive early enough at the venue that I could ask them my question in person.

Unfortunately, when I arrived at the venue, Tamarra's sister-in-law greeted me and told me that the wedding would not be taking place; Andy had suffered some medical complications during the rehearsal dinner and had been transported to a hospital closer to their home in Bloomington. I got Tamarra's phone number from her and tried to call, but she did not recognize my phone number, so she didn't answer. I decided to go to the hospital myself. I got the marriage license from Tamarra's sister-in-law and headed for Normal. I decided that as long as Andy was conscious and able to consent to the wedding, we would still have a wedding that day.

In my car, I took a quick peek at the marriage license. It was issued for LaSalle County, where the wedding was scheduled to occur. But now we were hoping to hold the wedding in Normal, in McLean County. Illinois law says your marriage license has to be issued by the county in which the marriage will take place.

I started making some phone calls. Who did I know with the right legal or political connections to help me navigate through the system and make sure the wedding would be "kosher?" I was fortunate to reach our Temple board member Julia Rietz, who also happens to be State's Attorney for Champaign County. She called former county clerk Gordy Hulten, who in turn called the county clerk in McLean County. She and her assistant agreed to go into the office on a Sunday to complete the paperwork for a new marriage license. Further, they were able to find a McLean County judge, also working on his day off, to waive the usual waiting period so that the license would be valid on the day it was issued. By the time I got to the hospital, Andy was (thankfully) on the mend, and the processes were already in place to make the wedding a possibility. Within the hour, we were ready to proceed with the ceremony.

Sure, the wedding was solemnized with water and ice chips instead of wine, and Andy crushed a Styrofoam cup instead of breaking a glass. But in the eyes of Judaism and in the eyes of the State of Illinois, Tamarra and Andy are indeed married. We were even able to Facetime most of the wedding guests so that they could "witness" the ceremony.

The wedding was, I believe, a fitting testament to Tamarra and Andy's love for one another. But there was a broader love present that day: the compassion of the various individuals—strangers to Tamarra and Andy—who were willing to go out of their way to ensure that the ceremony could take place.

To me, this story speaks volumes about the value of relationships and connections. Because enough people knew the right people to call, and all those people were willing and able to share in the vision of making it possible to move forward with this wedding, this story has a happy ending.

Not all of us are going to encounter "adventures" on the order of what Andy and Tamarra endured. But we, too, can benefit from the power of relationships. One of the many joys I've found in being connected to Sinai Temple is that the members of our congregation tend to embrace the notion of embracing one another throughout life's ups and downs. We stand with one another in times of sadness, struggle, and grief; we rejoice with one another in times of celebration. As we build bridges within our community, and through outreach to the broader community, we strengthen one another.

Rabbi Nachman of Breslov had many renowned teachings. Perhaps his most famous is traditionally translated as, "The whole world is a narrow bridge; the most important thing is not to be afraid at all." But some argue that what the rabbi actually meant to say is, "...the most important thing is not to be consumed by fear." So long as we have bridges (however narrow they may feel), so long as we establish relationships and value connections, then our lives are intertwined, we can lean on one another, and we need never feel alone or afraid.

B'shalom,

Rabbi Alan Cook

From the Board

Spring for Sinai Temple's Board of Trustees is a busy time. Not only do we have our most important task of the year to accomplish—the approval of the next year's Temple budget—but we also have to provide nominations for who will be invited to join the Board for the next term.

As the body charged with fiduciary responsibility over all of Sinai's finances, the Board takes its budget approval task very seriously. Everyone who contributes financially to Sinai Temple has a right to expect the Board to make sure that Temple funds are used appropriately and efficiently to cover necessary expenses and make the Temple run smoothly. If we're doing our job properly, Sinai Temple's operation should appear effortless and seamless from the outside, all problems, either expected or unexpected, dealt with quickly and efficiently, while staying within our monetary means. It is the Board that determines what expenses are critical to our operation, but the Board is not the final arbiter. We are just the representatives of the congregation, so, at the Annual Meeting, the Treasurer presents the budget to the assembly, and attendees vote to approve or reject the Board's recommendations.

The second task is the nomination process for the new Board. The nomination slate has been sent out to all congregants, and, like the Temple budget, the final approval rests with the assembled congregation at the Annual Meeting. A special committee was convened by the Board to find the talented and dedicated individuals who have indicated a willingness to be put forth for Board membership in the coming year.

I thank the members of this committee for its excellent work. The committee consisted of: Randy Rosenbaum (chair), Tonya Bernstein, Shira Epstein, Ben LeRoy, Lil Levant, Louis Liebovich and Ruth Sosnoff.

I think the nomination slate they have presented reflects both the face and the heart of the membership of our congregation, and I hope those attending the Annual Meeting will agree. The Annual Meeting occurs on Sunday, May 19. We will enjoy an ice-cream social at 7:00 pm, followed by the business meeting at 7:30. I hope to see everyone there!

Finally, I'd like to add a personal note. Many of you know that I have had recent health challenges. The good news is that my condition is completely treatable and manageable, and I will be as good as new very soon. But the best news is that I live in a community where people care about each other. This shouldn't have been news to me, because I've experienced it in so many ways time and time again, but somehow when one feels vulnerable, it makes all the more difference. The unstinting outpouring of support, love, and compassion from my Sinai Temple community has been overwhelming. It is an honor and a privilege to have you all as friends, and I want you to know how much I appreciate everyone's ahavah and chesed these last few months.

See you in Temple!

SINAI TEMPLE APRIL 2019 BOARD MEETING

- ☆ The Board is delighted to welcome Alia Horwick as a new Temple Sinai member. Please welcome her to our community.
- ☆ Rabbi Alan discussed his D'Var Torah. He related a heartwarming story of a recent wedding he was to officiate, and then the wedding was unable to proceed at the last minute due to a medical incident with the groom. Rabbi visited the groom and family at the hospital, where they decided they wanted to proceed with the ceremony. As it was a weekend and the hospital was in a different county than the county planned for the wedding, the marriage certificate and other paperwork was not in order for a legal nuptial. To help solve this problem and marry the couple, Rabbi got in touch with various Temple members, who then communicated with their colleagues. The Rabbi was thus able to officially marry the couple in the hospital with all legal requirements in place. This moving story reinforces and provides testimony to the power and importance of social connections and joining with other people to offer help to community members who may be afflicted with illness and reminds us not to leave alone those who are sick or suffering.

- ☆ Landau|Zinder will return to Champaign-Urbana and our Temple community the weekend of April 27-29, 2019. There will be planned interactions with community members of the Temple and a couple of focus groups. This is an excellent opportunity for Sinai members to meet with the architects and discuss ideas for the upcoming renovation. The next planned visit of the architects will take place the weekend of May 26, 2019.
- ☆ The planned budget for fiscal year 2020 was discussed and approved by the Board.

From our Educator Rabbi Jody Cook

It is the beginning of May and the end of our religious school year is here. We have celebrated many accomplishments and milestones this year, students have grown (not just taller), teachers have learned from students, students have learned from teachers. Here is a recap—just a few things to recognize and remember as we take a break from Sinai Temple Religious School for the summer:

We have celebrated with 12 B'nai Mitzvah students (and will celebrate a few more in the coming weeks).

We have supported families confronted with illnesses, births, and emergencies.

We invited community members to teach, connecting our youth and the CU Jewish community. We had dancing, Israeli Graffiti, challah baking, Israeli Music, Jews and Sports, meditation and more.

Ethan Soloveychik, served on the NFTY-CARR (Chicago Area Region) youth group board.

We collaborated with CUJF to host panel discussions for local teens who might be thinking about career paths.

We started a chavurah for Jewish families with children 3 and under. Monthly playgroups fill a gap in what our community previously offered.

Our Confirmation class traveled to Chicago to experience Shabbat with different Jewish organizations, to visit the Illinois Holocaust Museum and to bond.

We raised over $700 of tzedakah money to donate to various organizations. We also donated food, school supplies, baby supplies and other items throughout the year.

We had our BIGGEST Purim Greeting fundraiser to date! Jake Rosenbaum (a STRS alum) gave back to our community by building an outdoor play area.

There have been KIDDish Club events throughout the year as well as CUTY events.

4 Alef Hebrew students completed learning the alef bet in record time!

Many students are choosing to spend part of their summer at Jewish summer camp. My hope is that all students will find ways to connect to Judaism during our summer break . . . more to come in next month's article!

RELAX & REFRESH EVENT

Thank you to everyone who attended our Sinai Spa day on Sunday, March 31st. Although our attendance was light, those who participated were very enthusiastic about the benefits they gained from each mindfulness practice.

We raised $270 for our Temple and received positive responses such as: "The Spa Day was great. All the workshops were fun, engaging and inspiring. I appreciate your making this experience possible."

"I enjoyed the event in spite of my neck pain. I left feeling better than when I walked in the door."

—Diane Ore

Participants rotated among three activities: Meditation led by Linda Weiner, Tai Chi led by Eileen Kohen, and Chair Yoga led by Robin Goettel. Based on a first-come, first-served basis, some also enjoyed a chair massage from Eric Beckley with BodyWork-Associates.

Afterwards, we all gathered at our fun 'Smoothies and Schmooze' Bar. Thanks to Rabbi Jody and Gabe who helped with setup and made our smoothies, and to Joan Kozoll and Carol Belber who welcomed everyone at the registration desk. We appreciate Roxanna's help in the design of our flyers and other publicity tasks. Robin, Linda, and Eileen were pleased to sponsor the two hours of chair massages.

THE GREEN TEAM

Did you know that the first Earth Day was a landmark in the environmental movement on April 22, 1970 when 20 million Americans gathered in public spaces, in parks, and in auditoriums to demand a healthy, sustainable environment? Earth Day is now celebrated in communities around the world.

Members of the Sinai Temple Green Team helped to organize and moderate the CU Earth Day Clean Energy Jobs Act Forum focused on green, clean jobs and an Illinois economy supporting renewable energy and a clean environment for all.

In keeping with the water conservation theme highlighted earlier this Spring, see if you can spot a new feature on your latest Illinois American Water bill. A big blue water drop shows household average daily water use. With this information you can participate in a personal challenge to reduce water consumption. While summer water use often increases due to watering lawns and gardens, check out local resources like the May 4th Rain Barrel Sale in Urbana held in the Anita Purves Nature Center parking lot to purchase rain barrels and receive tips on keeping a healthy lawn and garden throughout the summer.

The Sinai Temple Green Team looks forward to joining Faith in Place at the 2019 Advocacy Day in Springfield on May 9th. We will gather at the Illinois State Capitol Building for a rally and to educate our legislators about important environmental issues. Bus transportation will be provided; register for the event at <https://www.faithinplace.org/events/advocacy-day-2019>.

CHAI LUNCHEON

The Craft of Creativity

Wednesday, May 15th at 11:15 AM

Sinai Temple

Jeffrey Loewenstein will speak on the craft of creativity. He is Associate Dean of Graduate Education and a Professor of Organizational Behavior at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign's Gies College of Business.

Creativity has long been thought of as a personal trait, a gift bestowed on some and unachievable by others. Stories of creative products are often abridged to an elusive "aha!" moment that resulted from of a momentary stroke of genius. This talk will present a different way to understand creativity. The core idea is that creativity is a process of changing our minds. We can all learn to go through the process more often and more effectively—we can all be more creative. This talk will help get you started.

Lunch will be served and the cost is $5.00. Please RSVP by contacting the CUJF office, 367-9872 or cujf@cujf.org. Transportation is available upon request.

YESOD LE'ATID

Foundation for the Future

Thank you to those who have already pledged or given funds to the Yesod Le'Atid campaign for renovations to realize our vision of a welcoming, inclusive Jewish community.

We have developed a list of Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) that you can find on the Sinai Temple web page.

Below are a few we have been asked:

☆ How much are you asking me to contribute?

We are asking you to contribute an amount that is significant to you, something that would be extraordinary in your philanthropic commitments.

☆ May I contribute to one particular part of the project?

Because of the comprehensive scope and the interdependence of the various components, we strongly prefer to consolidate all contributions to the total project. We are glad, however, to align the recognition for your contribution with the portion of the project that is most meaningful to you.

☆ Can I pledge over a period of time?

Certainly. You can pay over a period of three years or less. You may download a pledge form on the Sinai Temple web page.

Please email me at wynne.korr@gmail.com if you have any questions.

Wynne Korr, Development Committee Chair

Since the first visit by the architects in March, the SRC has gone through the input provided by the congregation and passed on that feedback for the architects to consider. Based on the Board's decision in March to expand the work to include a Master Plan, the SRC has also had some discussions about long-term goals to make Sinai safer and more accessible throughout the building. By the time you read this text in the May bulletin, the SRC will have hosted another visit by the architects at the end of April. In between the visits, the SRC is also meeting with the architects by phone on conference calls, which keeps the discussion going and does not incur any extra costs. (The design work is a fixed-price project, although travel is an extra expense.) Additional trips by the architects are planned for May and July.
