From Rabbí Alan Cook's Desk

"Mai Chanukah?" These two Aramaic words appear suddenly in the midst of the Talmudic tractate on Shabbat, providing an opening to the first comprehensive discussion of this holiday within Jewish texts.

Mai Chanukah literally means, "What is Chanukah?" But of course, that's not really the question that the rabbis are asking. They know full well what Chanukah is. More precisely, they are asking, "How can we understand Chanukah? Within what framework shall we observe this holiday?"

The rabbis of the Talmud were confronting, in their own way, many of the same issues that American Jewry confronts today at this season: popular winter holidays (in our case, Christmas; in the rabbinic age, celebrations revolving around the winter solstice) with customs and rites that are easily coopted into Chanukah observances, elevating what had been a minor festival to one of the most widely observed moments on the Jewish calendar. So the rabbis sought to mitigate against the impact of Chanukah's widespread embrace by amplifying other themes: the miracle, the light, the act of (re)dedication. So too, in our era, does it behoove us to examine these themes.

Miracles. We are all familiar with the story of the oil, thought to be sufficient for only one night, lasting instead for eight nights. This, like other miracles described in our tradition, stands in opposition to our modern sensibilities, which tend to insist upon a logical explanation for every unusual phenomenon. Since most of us don't experience biblically epic disruptions of the natural order, we might come to think that miracles don't occur in modern times—or, perhaps, that they never did. But Chanukah asks us to engage in the mitzvah of pirsum ha-nes, publicizing the miracle. By acknowledging the miracle of the oil—by opening our hearts, our minds, and our imaginations to the possibility of such miracles—we embrace the wonder of God's work in our world.

Light. It's no accident that in addition to Chanukah, celebrations such as Christmas, Kwanzaa, and Diwali (to name but a few) also incorporate customs and rituals involving light. In the deep gloom of winter, we harness the power of human ingenuity to literally and figuratively brighten the world, making room for light and warmth and hope. At many points in human history, lighting a candle and driving out darkness was a deeply subversive, or even dangerous, act. Today the lights of our chanukiyah can exemplify power and courage, trumpeting the message that we will continue to be proud and to shine brightly throughout the world.

Dedication (and re-dedication). The heroes whom we know as the Maccabees were from the Hasmonean dynasty of priests, so it is not surprising that their first instinct after defeating King Antiochus was to turn their attention to re-purifying the Temple. In our own day, we also have the opportunity to renew and purify ourselves. We pray that the joy of the season stays with us even beyond the eight nights of the festival, so that we may know happiness, blessing, and peace throughout our lives.

May we all enjoy a happy and festive Chanukah.

L'Shalom.

From President Jacob Sosnoff

Dear Friends,

What is in your Judaica box? I ask this somewhat odd question because my parents recently brought me their Judaica box. They are in the process of downsizing, selling the house that they raised us boys in and relocating to Florida. The 2-bedroom condo they are buying requires that they get rid of a lot of stuff. Over, the last several months my parents and I have had some interesting conversations about the family treasures they have uncovered. I think we have finally come to an agreement that it is ok to donate my trombone that I played in 8th grade (realistically I think it is more appropriate to say I held a trombone in middle school—not sure I ever reached the skill level of playing).

When they first told me they were going to bring me their Judaica box I began to ponder what family treasures were about to passed down to me. Growing up we didn't have a large amount of Judaica laying around the house. I have vague memories of our menorah (almost always covered in wax), Shabbat candlesticks, Kiddush cup and perhaps a seder plate. We also had a large collection of several editions of Maxwell house haggadahs covered in remnants of numerous family seders. I also remember a little white prayer book that my father would use to lead us in holiday blessings. Perhaps the most memorable aspect of the book was not that it was one of the few Hebrew books we had in the house, but rather that it had survived an encounter with the family dog and bore the chew marks to prove it. Which of these items would be bestowed to me?

As I eagerly awaited to find out what was going to be in my parent's Judaica box, I begin to wonder what would I place in mine. Would I include the numerous matza covers the boys made in religious school? Candlesticks? Our slightly skewed Kiddush cup (it leans to the left)? Or the Jewish book of why — that as an adult helps demystify a lot of the traditions that have been passed down? Our mezuzah? As I pondered what I would include in my Judaica box, it became clear to me that no matter what items I choose, they would not fully encompass my Jewish life. For that, I would need to capture all of my Jewish experiences.

As I had this realization, it became clear if I would ever have an adequate Judaica box then I would have to somehow include the energy and vitality of Sinai temple where most of my Jewish experiences have taken place. Ruth choosing Judaism, the joy of having Isaac's Bar Mitzvah, Malachi and Zev's dancing at Shabbat rocks, celebrating simchas with family, the somber moments of funerals, etc. How do I put those moments, those experiences in a box? When I reach the stage of life that I need to give my boy's their portion of the Judaica box, I hope I have figured out how to share the wonder of Sinai with them. As far as my parent's Judaica box was concerned, it contained my Bubbe and Zayde's Shabbat candlesticks, my greatgrandparent's Matza cover, and a Kiddush cup. I am grateful to have these items. I am not sure how I feel about it containing my Bar Mitzvah picture album and some truly embarrassing pictures! But I know I am thankful for the memories that are attached to them.

Thank you for contributing to the vibrancy of our temple and making it such a wonderful place to experience and form lifelong memories.

Cheers, Jake Sosnoff

SINAI TEMPLE NOVEMBER 2019 BOARD MEETING

☼ The Sinai Temple Board of Trustees was unable to meet for its regularly scheduled monthly meeting due to unexpectedly severe, adverse weather and unsafe road conditions. The Board will be meeting soon, and updates from this make-up and next scheduled Board meeting will be provided in the next Bulletin.

From our Educator Rabbi Jody Cook

Who Came Through the Door in November?

Theodore Herzl—Had a vision of creating a Jewish homeland. He died before Israel was realized as this homeland, but he is buried in Israel and is credited with having the idea that the Jewish people need a homeland.

Jessica Meir—NASA astronaut and scientist. She is currently exploring the International Space Station and was part of the first all female space walk just a few weeks ago. Her father is an Iraqi Jew who has lived all over the world. Jessica grew up in the United States and is connected to her Jewish heritage through her father.

Eliezer ben Yehudah—Insisted that his family only speak in Hebrew and is credited as being the father of the modern language of Ivrit (Hebrew). His son was not allowed to speak in any other language and didn't have a lot of friends (language barrier) until Hebrew caught on. Can you imagine making up words for things that didn't have words? Modern Hebrew words are created by understanding Biblical words that are related and by using words borrowed from other languages.

Menorah Creations

Make a menorah (we WILL NOT light these) for the Sinai Temple Hanukkah celebration on December 22. Prizes will be awarded by age this year. Please DO NOT put your name on the menorah for judging purposes. All entries should be put on display before dinner starts on December 22.

During the months of November and December, the SRC is beginning the next design phase of the renovation project. First, the SRC is planning to sign a contract with the same architecture firm for continuing services, and then we'll work with the architects to review bids from specialists in structural, mechanical, acoustic, lighting and audio-visual consultants. There will also be a process to accept and review proposals from contractors. All of this work is to assemble the team for the project, while we're still making decisions about the design, so that everyone is in agreement early, and we can avoid the situation where we have to scramble to undo decisions later.

The congregational feedback from the designs was incredibly helpful, and much of it confirmed that we are on the right track with major decisions, and some of the suggestions also helped nudge decision-making with regards to some of the design elements. Thank you to everyone who provided input!

leals heels

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

The time for Meals-on-Wheels commitment is approaching once more—the weeks starting December 2nd and December 9th. Meals are collected from the Hendrick House on Green Street at 10.30 AM, and the routes which are in Urbana or Champaign are usually completed by 12 noon. This commitment which Sinai Temple has been fulfilling for many years is greatly appreciated by the wider community. If you would like to volunteer contact Tony Soskin at: tonysoskin@gmail.com.

Giving for December

■We are sorry the giving information is not available for this month's bulletin due to unforeseen circumstances this week, but will be printed in January's Bulletin. Thank you for your patience.

THE END OF THE CALENDAR YEAR IS FAST APPROACHING. All donations to Sinai Temple postmarked December 31, 2019, will be credited to your account for the 2019 tax year. In January, the office will mail out IRS contribution letters for all deductible contributions made during 2019. If you have not yet made a pledge for FY2019-20, it would be greatly appreciated. Knowing how much people plan to donate helps us meet our budgetary goals. We wish you and your family a joyous New Year!

Don't Forget to donate to the Martin Luther King Jr. Scholarship Program Fund.

If you would like to contribute to this worthwhile and local cause, please make your check payable to Sinai Temple and indicate MLK Fund in the memo line.

Thank you to everyone who contributed with food or monetary gifts to the Eastern Illinois Food Bank during Yom Kippur. At the end of October the final total was $5330 and 240 pounds of food collected—enough to provide 26,850 meals for local individuals and families.

Ш

Please send your donations made payable to Sinai Temple. Only donations of $15.00 or more per fund and honoree will be listed in the Bulletin.

REDUCE, REUSE & RECYCLE FALL PROJECT CONCLUDES . . . . AND CONTINUES!

We had a successful conclusion to our fall 3R project on October 27. Carol Jo Morgan, Idea Store Cofounder, presented ideas for Green Activities at Home, where everyone in the household can take simple steps to reduce energy use and save money.

The votes in our 3R contest produced winners in the three categories:

Reduce -- Erez Cohen: Eat less meat by selecting plant based foods.

Reuse -- Reva Egherman: After shopping, put clean plastic bags from fruit and vegetables back into your reusable grocery bag, you'll be ready for your next trip.

Recycle -- Sarah Bleill: take plastic bags, plastic overwrap from paper towels, etc., zip-close bags, and dry cleaner bags to grocery and retail stores that accept plastic bags.

See the Green Team page at the Sinai Temple website for all of the great contest ideas.

We finished the day by wrapping up our collection of personal care items. We sent off a medium size carton to TerraCycle/Toms of Maine for recycling. We had two large bags of polystyrene (Styrofoam) to take to Dart Industries in Urbana for recycling. Several members brought dozens of used/broken office supply items for our TerraCycle Zero Waste carton.

The Zero Waste Carton is not full, and we have relocated it to the Religious School teacher's room, where you are welcome to continue to bring office supply items until the carton is full. You can bring broken pens, used markers, tape dispensers, desk organizers, card/document filers, binders, calendars, labels/label sheet backing, paper cutters, correction supplies, paper clips, staplers and binder clips.

Continue to put aside your used personal care items. Sinai Temple members indicated we should continue our recycling efforts, so we will look for a Spring weekend when we can have another recycling event. Please put aside any brand of used mouthwash bottles and caps, toothbrushes, deodorant containers and caps, soap packaging, floss containers and toothpaste tubes and caps.

Thanks to everyone for your participation and remember to reduce, reuse and recycle whenever you can!
